First year anniversary of Home Reports highlights Quest as the market leader

One year after the successful introduction of the Home Report scheme in Scotland, Quest, the major IT infrastructure supplier in the HIPs, Home Reports and Energy Performance Certificate (EPC) markets, has released figures confirming that 71% of Home Reports are being processed on Quest technology, across the entire market.

Quest's Home Report system enables report providers, estate agents, solicitors, surveyors and Domestic Energy Assessors operating in Scotland to quickly order a Home Report online. The low-cost of ordering an electronic Home Report (£10) includes the use of an online credit card system, a deferred payment system and bespoke branding of the completed Home Report. A professional printing service is also available for those wishing to deliver a paper copy to customers.

James Sherwood-Rogers, managing director, Quest said: "We have been working closely with the property sector in Scotland to ensure the Home Report system was extremely simple to use, quick to deliver and, importantly, cost effective. The fact that our technology is now processing 71% of all Home Reports across the entire market is proof that this combination is suiting many property professionals selling homes in Scotland and we are proud to be leading the way."
